W. C. P. BRECKINRIDGE.

When the life of Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge went out at the midnight hour last Saturday night, the State lost one of her most gifted men, brightest attorneys an ablest statesmen.

As an orator, he was without a peer in the State, and ranked with the ablest in the nation. As a writer, he was forceful, and his pen seemed to dip deep in the everlasting blue of nature's dome, and drew its inspiration from the throbbing heart of man.

While, as an orator, the silver melody of his voice had the power to hush the silence of angry throngs, and men were made to feel the influence of his magnetic power. He possessed the power to clothe his thoughts in the choicest language, and yet make the remaining so clear as to be understood by even the unlearned.

He possessed a personality which was many sided to the different people with whom he associated.

To those who were in the war with him he was the soldier; to those who trusted their property or their lives in his hands, he was the lawyer; to those who sat and listened to his eloquence, he was the orator; to those who followed his views as expressed by tongue or pen he was the statesman; to those who eagerly scanned the editorial columns of his paper and read his thoughts as they were printed in the public press, he was the editor; to all who had occasion to appeal to him for aid, he was a friend.

His death will leave a vacancy in the community that none are able to fill.

William Campbell Preston Breckinridge was born in Baltimore, Md., August 28, 1837. He was educated at Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, and afterwards completed his course at Center College, Danville, Ky., and afterward attended Law College in Louisville, where he graduated in 1857, and located and began the practice of his profession in Lexington.

When the Civil War broke out in 1860 he entered the Confederate army and joined Gen. John H. Morgan's command at Georgetown. He rose to the rank of colonel, commanding the Ninth cavalry the last two years of the war.

After the war he returned to Lexington and took up the practice of his chosen profession, and at the same time was editor of the Observer and Reporter, finally resigning this position he continued the practice of law until 1884, when he was elected to Congress and held that position for ten years.

In 1894 he was defeated by Maj. W. C. Owens for re-election, after which he took upon himself the duties of editorial writer of the Morning Herald, which position he held until the time of his death.

It seems that the secret ballot system has proven to be an excellent one for the perpetration of fraud, and affords opportunity for the juggling of returns to such an extent that the honest people throughout the State are becoming more and more disgusted with politics.

It seems that we have reached a point where a man, who by chance of circumstances, happened to be on the opposing side from that of the manipulators of the political affairs, he is sure to go down in defeat, no matter what his standing in his community may be, or how insignificant his opponent may be.

This is a deplorable state of affairs and should not exist anywhere, and will sooner or later bring the party that tolerates it to an ignominious defeat.

We trust that such a state of affairs does not exist in Knox county, and we sincerely trust that it never will.

These schemes are the outcroppings of Goebelism, pure and simple, and surely no decent Republican would desire to have his conduct or character compared to that contemptible conduct known from one end of our State to the other, and which bears the name of its originator in his indecent methods in securing desired results from the party when only a minority of the delegation representing the great mass of the people favored him.

Let us urge upon all Republicans to deal honestly and fairly in all their contests and not give occasion for criticism or complaint.

THANKSGIVING.

The harvest has been gathered into the garner and the winter's store is well filled with provisions.

The President, at the head of our Nation, as well as the Governors of the respective States, have followed the established custom and issued their annual Thanksgiving proclamation.

It is well for us after the close of a fruitful harvest to offer unto God thanks for his mercies and his blessings, and to this end the last Thursday in November has for years been set apart for the occasion of thanksgiving and prayer, and the people are urged to cease from their labors and assemble in their respective places of worship and there offer their thanks for the blessings of the year.

It is to be hoped that the American people will ever remember to celebrate this day and keep it as in the past—as a day of worship.

SOME of the defeated candidates in the recent county primary seem to feel a little sore over the result, but we hope they will soon forget their troubles and line up for the nominees. It was impossible for everyone to win, and someone had to go down in defeat, and we are glad to note that those who were defeated by the narrowest margin were the first to announce their intention to support the nominees. This shows the true Republican spirit, and we trust it will be followed by all others.

WHY WE SHOULD GIVE THANKS.

Because the Republican party was victorious and elected Roosevelt and Fairbanks by an overwhelming and unprecedented majority along with them a Republican House of Representatives in the National Congress and we can now enjoy continued peace, progress and prosperity the whole Nation be pleased and the world benefited by our influence.

If the handing out of a "snack" to Booker T. Washington resulted in such a tremendous landslide, what would have been the result if he had been given a "possum supper"?

THE Kentucky Republicans will keep a permanent headquarters established in Louisville.

It now looks like even the Solid South is seceding from the Democratic party.
